Emin Bey and Stanley.

If it be true that Osman Digna's letter to it must be confessed that the outlook appears of burning. blue for the gallant Austrian Governor- Let this be the watchword of the party ever, admitting the much-to-be-regretted standards next November. probability, not to say fact, that Emin is the Mahdi's prisoner, it by no means follows the most wily, tricky, and unreliable the Virginian and News when it says; is a mere matter of inference unsupported by the opinions of some of the most experienced African travellers. In considering the matter it should be remembered that the Stanker expedition was not opening for the standard of the standard o cast somewhat in the mould of Chinesa Gonbox, by whom he was appointed to his governor-generalship. Whilst the Messenger favors the adherence to the lariff views contained in the national Democratic platform, is of the opinion that the recent defeat of the party is attributable to other causes and not to the tariff issue, and favors reaewing the fight four years hence with that as the most prominent issue in the canvass, it cannot see the propriety of inserting a tartif plank is our State platform. What has the Goverage of Virginia or the Legislature to do with duties on imports or the regulation of foreign commerce? Have we not great State interests enough to engage our attention without lugging in Federal issues? The result of the recent election ought to warn us against a danger to our home interests that would be more damaging toan the like we suffer from the Federal system of taxation. Republicanism came within a 1,325 votes of capturing the State. Suppose it should in the next election wipe out that small majority and elect the Legislature and Executive officers of the State. In such an event what would be the fate of our courts of justice, our schools, colleges, and asytums? What effect would it have upon the development of our mineral and other resources? Who can tolerate the man that would on unimportant issues risk defeat at such a time and under such circumstances? What is the difference between a tariff of 47 duced the utterances of a goodly number of our State exchanges belonging to the Demoeratic party, but in none of them is the point better stated than in the following paragraph from the Culpeper Observer: "What shall be the question in the State campaign next fall? The tariff is above the viewsitudes of a State canvass, and there is no reason why it should be an issue or even referred to except in an incidental way. As referred to except in an incidental way. As it is the only question on which Democrats show a disposition to divide it would be where to keep it out of view unit such time as its discussion would result in something—until there is a national election. The State debt may to some extent be a factor, but both parties have pledged themselves to stand by the Riddleberger bill as the final settlement of a question which at one time unsettled everything clae in the State and proved to be a vehicle on which Motone and his motiey cohorts rode into power. It would be extremely unwise to revive it or to permit its revival. It should be treated as a dead issue. The real question is, Shall wealth and intelligence retain control of the Stale or poverty and ignorance take possession? In this the Democrats should find the cement to hold them together for the protection of the right of all individuals and parties."

There is the cement that is to unite us the English authorities at Suakim contained in one common mass. Such considerations the letter from the Khedive to Eura Bey, ought to keep us from fiddling whilst handed to STANLEY when the lafter left Cairo, Rome if not burning is at least in danger
